They argued that there is no office more important to the people of the coming state and none that offers a better chance for making a great reputation in the eyes of the people. A good executive, it is said, would be able to show such a great a would entitle

Mr. King expressed a desire to help Mr. Roberts to be governor of this territory, but he was informed that Mr. ritory, but he was informed that Mr. Hoberts had declared it would be impossible, for various good reasons, for him to accept the office and that he would take the congressional nomination or name. If defeated for that, he was off the ticket altogether, though he had pledged his best efforts for the benefit of the party during the campaign.

At the end of the conference it was understood that Mr. King had not given a final answer to the proposition, but that he would wait until he saw what strength he would be able to show before the convention, and if he found that the call was for Roberts he would obey the will of his fetale in would obey the will of his friends in the matter.

The delegations which came in last might and "arious leaders in the cornties seemed determined that Roberts should have a place on the ticket. In many of the southern counties he had beer, mentioned by the press and leaders as a possibility for governor and during the day this was used to push king. The Roberts workers, however, gave out the ultimatum of "Congress or nothing," and before night a seemed practically settled that Tongress or nothing." and before vention for the purpose of choosing night is seemed practically settled that Roberts would be nominated. Again the friends of Roberts and King, who are endeavoring to bring about perfect harmony and the best possible combination, will attempt to bring about an understanding. It is hoped that this afternoon it will be possible to announce that Roberts is for congressman and King for governor. It is to be said for both of them that defeat will not cause them to sulk. The governorship contest was still unsettled last night. When A. W. NEW YORK, Sept. 4.- The regatta committee of the New York Yacht club today announced the program of rules governing the America's cup race. The prin-

The first, third and lifth races shall be

The first, third and fifth races shall be to windward or to leeward and return. The second and fourth races shall be around an equatorial transfe.

One day shall intervene between each racing day under special agreement. A race postponed or not finished within the time limit shall be decided before the next race is taken un. The races will be started off Sandy Hook Eghtship, the preparatory signal being made at 1959 a. m., but if on the day of a race, the windward or leeward of the course cannot be laid from the lightship, then the race will be started from some point further out to see. Although the measurement of Defender and Valkyrie will not be announced officially until Friday and possibly not until Saturday, enough has been learned to make a reasonably correct estimate of the racing lengths and the time allowance given by the challenger. The big sloop contesting for the cup that the American boat was held will give time, although it will not be agreat as was expected. The racing lengths as estimated by a well known designer and expert are 101.23 for Valkyric and 100.02 for Defender. Under the rules of the New York Yanht club this would mean an allowance of a little less than a minute on a thirty mile course. These measurements were shown to Captain Sycamore today and he said be thought that they would prove to be nearly correct. He thought that the allowance would be about one minute as calculated.

I have known both Fraker and Horris for nearly twenty years, and when I read the story of Fraker's drowning, while on a fishing excursion, with such a crook as Horrie, I was at once struck with the strangeness of his companionship, as evicence of rascality. I have been quietly at work on the case since. From the first I was convinced that Fraker was allve. Fraker's Hiding Place.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 4.—After a night and a day spent in the county fail, Dr. George W. Fraker was taken to Richmond on the 5 o'clock train this evening. He left in charge of Sheriff Holman, of Ray county and City Marshal Byers of Richmond, and in that city Fraker will finally be brought into court to meet the charges against him. While some attitue the crime, the attorneys for the insurance companies interested have relaxed none of their vigor and declare as strongly that the prosecution will be quick and positive, and that they have the statutes to back the charges they will make.

Did Not Conspire.

Did Not Conspire.

In all his interviews last night and to-day, Dr. Fraker steadfastly adhered to his former statement that he did not conspire to defraid the insurance companies nor did any of bis relatives. This claim, however, has apparently been set at naught by a little inadvertence on the doctor's part. In a conversation with several reporters in his cell today, he stated that while in Kansas City snortly after his supposed drowning in 1833, he bought the suit of clothes his now wears at a local clothing house. The admission was a loyous one for the insurance attorneys, who state positively that the suit was brought by George Horrie, the convict whom they have all along alleged was the doctor's accomplice. It is now believed that Fraker never came to Kansas City at all, but that Horries hought the suit and transferred it to him out at some outside point.

Interest centers to a great extent in Fraker's young Minnesota companion, and many believe the detectives made a mistake in letting him go.
